

THE FEASIBILITY OF SUSPENDED CULTURE OF SCALLOPS (PECTINIDAE)

By Gudrun G. Thórarinsdóttir

Marine Research Institute, P O. Box 1390, IS-121, Reykjavik, Iceland

ABSTRACT

Most of the world production of scallops comes from natural fisheries, but there is a growing interest in cultivation. The dominating culture and harvesting species are mentioned as well as the culturing time for various scallop species at different localities. The methods and the feasibility of suspended culture of scallops is discussed and compared to bottom culture.