ABSTRACT

Flakes are traditionally prepared in India using pulse and cereal flour. Chicoreus ramosus and Pleuroploca trapezium meat powder were incorporated with the traditional flakes to increase the nutritive value. Flakes prepared using C. ramosus meat have more appealing organoleptic characters than the flakes with P. trapezium. Flakes containing a combination of corn and C. ramosus are the best and all products have better storage life.
